Main Activities In The Last Job Position

- Data Analysis I've been analysing omics (SNP, CpG, expression, metabolites, etc.) data within numerous projects related to metabolic diseases. These projects involve collaborations with national and international consortia like CKDgen, CHARGE, IMIDIA, DIRECT or more recently RHAPSODY. My contribution covers GWA analyses, differential methylation/expression analyses, rare variants analyses, disease progression modelling, genetic epidemiology and meta-analyses.
- Team Management I've been managing a team of three junior statisticians. My role is to provide guidance regarding choices of statistical methodologies for analysing the data and code (mainly in R) optimisation for implementing these methodologies.
- Research My main research interests are mixed models, more recently extended to joint models. Joint model, especially the joint likelihood approach implemented in the R package JM was studied in the context of Type 2 Diabetes incidence and fasting glucose progression (associated by diagnosis definition) using SNPs as biomarkers of interest [Canouil et al., 2018].
